

Media Fact Sheet

Organization overview

TruMerit is a global healthcare workforce credentialing organization specializing in the evaluation, verification, and certification of internationally educated nurses and health professionals. With nearly five decades of experience, TruMerit supports safe, competent practice and professional mobility across borders.

Mission

To advance healthcare workforce quality and mobility through rigorous credential evaluation and globally recognized certification standards.

Headquarters

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania USA

CEO

Peter Preziosi, PhD, RN, CAE, FAAN

Core areas of work

Global health workforce development through:

- Credentials verification and evaluation
- Global certification & skills benchmarking
- Professional development & career advancement
- International engagement & thought leadership
- Advocacy for ethical recruitment & workforce standards

Global impact

- Supporting global health workers with career mobility for 50 years
- Serving regulators and health systems to protect patients and the public good
- Advancing standards across multiple global regions to support sustainable global health, resilient healthcare systems, and well-resourced workforces
- Partnering with professional associations and international organizations

Core services/solutions

- Best-in-class credentials verification and evaluation services
- First-ever global certifications for nurses and other allied health workers, including the Certified Global Nurse credential.
- Specialty credentials and micro-credential programs for global healthcare workers.
- Professional development resources to support career advancement

Media expertise

TruMerit leadership provides commentary on international nursing workforce trends, credentials evaluation issues, migration trends and challenges, licensing pathways for global nurses, ethical recruitment practices, health worker career mobility, and other relevant topics.